Scoring Points/Match Rules

Scoring Points

Throughout the match wrestlers are awarded points for the following moves: takedown, escape, reversal, and near fall. (The referee can also award points to a wrestler when an illegal hold has been used by his opponent or when his opponent is stalling.)

Takedown (2 points): A takedown occurs when either wrestler, starting from a standing position, gains control of his opponent on the mat. Takedowns can be accomplished by attacking an opponent's legs (e.g., double leg attack, low single leg attack, high crotch attack, high single attack) or by attacking the opponent's upper body (e.g., the headlock, the hiplock). The fireman's carry is an example of a takedown that combines a leg attack and an upper body attack.

Escape (1 point): The defensive wrestler is awarded one point for an escape when he moves to a neutral position. The standup is a commonly used escape. Other escapes include the sitout and the inside shoulder roll.

Reversal (2 points): The defensive wrestler is awarded a reversal when he moves from the bottom position and gains control of his opponent. This may take place while the defensive wrestler is either on his feet or on the mat. The switch is a common reversal; the Granby roll and the Peterson roll are escapes that often turn into reversals.

Near Fall (2 or 3 points): Points for a near fall are awarded when the offensive wrestler has control of his opponent in a near pinning position. This occurs when the defensive wrestler's shoulders are restrained four or fewer inches from the mat, one shoulder is touching the mat and the other is held at a forty-five degree angle to the mat, or when the wrestler is in a high bridge or supported on both elbows. If the near fall criteria are met for a period of two consecutive seconds, a two-point near fall is earned; if the near fall criteria are met for five continuous seconds, a three-point near fall is earned.

The Match

A match consists of three two-minute periods. In the first period both wrestlers start from a standing position (neutral). At the start of the second period a flip of a disc determines which wrestler has choice. He may defer his choice to the start of the third period or choose neutral, the top (offensive) or the bottom (defensive) position. In the third period, the wrestler who did not choose in the second period has choice of neutral, top or bottom.

End of the Match

A match ends when one of the following occurs: pin (fall), technical fall, or time expires.

Pin (Fall): A pin (fall) is awarded when a wrestler holds any part of both of his opponent's shoulders (or scapulae) to the mat for two consecutive seconds. Common pinning combinations are: 1) the far side cradle—the opponent's head and far knee are clamped together; 2) the near side cradle—the opponent's head and near knee are clamped together; and 3) the half nelson—the opponent has his head turned so that he is forced to his back.

Technical Fall: When a wrestler has earned a 15-point advantage over his opponent, the referee will end the match.

Time Expired: If there has not been a fall or a technical fall by the end of the third period, the winner of the match is determined by the number of individual points scored. The wrestler with the most points wins by decision. If the score is tied at the end of the three regulation periods, one or more additional overtime periods are added.

Overtime: Overtime will consist of a one-minute "sudden victory" period, and if needed two thirty-second tiebreakers. If the score remains tied at the end of two thirty-second tiebreakers, a thirty-second "sudden victory" ultimate tiebreaker shall take place. In this ultimate tiebreaker if there is no score, the offensive wrestler shall be declared the winner.
